Updated policy documents requested fall within the scope of Open Access Information, and publication of the data requested is in the public interest.

Provide a statement about how the release of information is in the public interest (optional)

Releasing animal nuisance complaint data is in the public interest because it promotes transparency, accountability, and informed decision-making across communities. Making this information publicly available demonstrates a commitment to openness and allows the public to understand how animal nuisance-related issues, such as excessive barking, is being managed. The data enables trend analysis, helping to identify recurring problems and whether the current processes are working as intended.
