(2) Landscape and aesthetic value

The object of this value is to identify trees that are of particular importance to the community due to their substantial contribution to the surrounding landscape.

A tree may be considered to be of landscape and aesthetic value if it is situated in a prominent location when viewed from a public place and it:

- (a) contributes significantly to the surrounding landscape based on its overall form, structure, vigour and aesthetic values; or
- (b) represents an outstanding example of the species, including age, size or habit; or
- (c) is an exceptional example of a locally native species that reached maturity prior to urban development in its immediate vicinity.

(3) Scientific value

The object of this value is to identify trees that are of particular importance to the community due to values associated with their ecological, genetic or botanical significance or ability to substantially contribute to the scientific body of knowledge and understanding.

A tree may be considered to be of scientific value when it:

- (e) is a significant habitat element for a threatened native species.

Statement against criteria

The tree is part of a group of 13 remnant yellow box and is registered for natural heritage value, size, stature, habitat and aesthetic landscape contribution before urban development establishes around it. The trees are at a mature stage of their life and now provide significant habitat opportunities for local fauna. Not only are these remnant trees important for the endemic local bird population but they also provide an educational opportunity for the teaching facilities nearby and are reminders that we are the custodians of these beautiful trees.
